To find out how all of this has been implemented in the game, we sat down with EA Sports' game director Marc Levine to ask him what FIFA is bringing to the experience, the design processes behind it and to dig into some little-discussed details of the game. Courtesy of @jer0lfonseca FIFA 22 - HyperMotion technology "The idea is to let the technology evolve the game and the user experience. The technology has already been deployed in other games, and we are really excited about it because you can do things that you couldn't do before. "In FIFA, one of the big challenges is trying to get the player to understand the game, and play with all the nuance of the game. So, we are constantly tuning, tweaking and improving the game to really present a great game and make it a game that the fans can enjoy. "That's a challenge for us, because as a designer you have to tune and tweak the gameplay so players are successful. But we have to really be sensitive to the fact that the implementation and how you get to where you want to get to has to feel good. The idea is to let the technology evolve the game and the user experience. The technology has already been deployed in other games, and we are really excited about it because you can do things that you couldn't do before. "FIFA has always been a very deep game with really good simulation. So, this is really a new way to present and tell the story of the game, and to enhance the play experience with the technology. The technology was initially conceived by a person at EA Sports who was a senior, brilliant designer. "The idea was to go back to the core of what we do best in the game and then pull in things that you don't expect. So, the first thing we did was we looked at in-game camera, and got the whole idea of a camera and 3D vision by feeding the graphics into the camera. Then, we looked at the controller and got that same experience - both a controller and the camera work in unison with the game engine. Then, we started to look at how to apply this to a whole new set of gameplay. "The first challenge was to create a game mechanic that would be able to capture exactly how a player moves. You see the body, you see the arm, you see the head, you see the

EA SPORTS FIFA is the most authentic sports video game on the planet, featuring real-world leagues, real-world players, and real-world football. FIFA is the best-selling football series of all time, with more than 300 million players worldwide. And with FIFA 22, FIFA delivers the game that will set the standard for years to come, with the most committed and innovative gameplay, fan-first innovations and the deepest and most immersive gameplay in any sports video game. How is the game engine built? The new cloud-based gaming platform is embedded in an entirely new engine, built on a new gaming engine framework called PlayFab, which allows more people to develop and create more content and games than ever before. The PlayFab platform not only unlocks the potential of the cloud for developers to create better games for developers and for gamers to play better games, but also for virtual operators, data center operators, and game developers to create new ways to monetize games for their customers. The result is a game engine with dynamic gameplay, smarter AI, streamlined backend delivery, enhanced security, and more than 1,000 new gameplay features. Can you explain a little more how the gameplay and engine features have been improved? We have a number of improvements that make each gameplay element more real-life like. Game moments are now more organic, with early-game development providing different variations of creative game moments like dribble-to-finish, back-heel shots, and duels where many players will be involved. The best defenders in the world now consistently force mistakes from more creative attacking players, while the most clinical finishers are even better at their job of finishing. Individual player development continues to be one of the most authentic parts of the experience, with more accurate player models, greater animation consistency and control, and a wide array of new face-lifted attributes. One of the most important innovations is the new use of data. All-new AI makes smarter and faster decisions, and a new display of player tendencies, making gameplay more fluid and dynamic. Further gameplay features and improvements, including new additions like Team Calling Off, improved ball dribbling, better decisions, and a smarter game engine, all contribute to a deeper, more authentic gameplay experience. The game also features new interaction with the world. Virtual operators and cloud gaming infrastructure connect players to real life, and how players play and live out their passions is all part of the game — whether that's
