It was a scandal that broke in March, when the star of the CBC's hit reality TV series "Winnipeg's Fiercest Couple" claimed she was forced to have sex with boyfriend Darren Douglas on the set. But to the show's host and producers, it was no big deal. "We're not going to have anybody here on set that isn't here for fun," Kimberly Hogan told the show's 4.2 million viewers in early March. She got her wish, as it turned out. The CBC killed the show on Monday after the couple married in Las Vegas in May. But it was a mere formality. Douglas had been telling anyone who asked that he had married Hogan — as she was and still is — in March. So what was the big deal about the show's cancellation? An announcement Monday from CBC's West Regional Network insisted it was "not indicative of any negative opinion of the show, the cast or staff." In fact, it's quite the opposite. "Winnipeg's Fiercest Couple" was a hit with viewers and critics who adored a couple who challenged convention. But, as fans discovered, when they are told to challenge convention on the set, they may not be so sure how far they should take it. "Winnipeg's Fiercest Couple" was a light, cheesy satire of TV dating contests. Its premise was that it would host a scooter race between a bar owner and a more surly bar-tender who would fight to steal business from each other. A few of the contestants were on the make and some were looking for love. The couples and contestants had co-ordinated their lives to live in the couple's rather static house. But it was in the name of good TV. "A little weird," the husband said on the set on March 2, "but we were just doing it to be funny." And they were funny. But it wasn't exactly the Super Bowl of television. The show was on the edge of or just over the line. There was the potential to have a genuine scandal on Business services in Europe are suffering a steep decline, with a net balance of 34,000 fewer businesses opening since the start of the year, according to new figures from the OECD. The findings, a key part of the organization's flagship survey of business activity in the 35 members of its Economic Survey Programme, show a fourth-quarter net loss of around 2.4 per cent. The fall, which nearly matches last year's 3.2 per cent, coincided with a steep rise in bankruptcies and self-employed among businesses. Data from the figures show overall business sector employment fell by 3.3 per cent in the fourth quarter compared to the previous year, with fewer businesses opening and more self-employed. There were 7.2 per cent fewer businesses in the fourth quarter than in the previous year, compared with 11.7 per cent fewer in the first three quarters, the figures show. Meanwhile, the number of self-employed in the fourth quarter rose by 9.8 per cent year-on-year to 1.4 million, compared with 8.2 per cent growth in the first three quarters. Output per business in the fourth quarter rose by 1.4 per cent from the previous year, and was 0.3 per cent higher than the previous quarter. Overall, total output across all sectors grew 0.2 per cent from the previous year and by 2.6 per cent than the previous quarter. The OECD said a decrease in European business confidence had been one of the main factors behind a decline in activity levels, as has been the case in the US. However, there are differences between the two areas. The OECD said in the US, greater reliance on technology and the increased use of e-commerce had helped the US lead in the rise in business formation. Meanwhile, the OECD said there had been a pronounced dip in overall business confidence this year, and that the decline in business activity was steeper than in the US and Japan. This year, there were 30,000 fewer businesses than in 2012, compared with 8,000 in Japan and 11,000 in the US. The fall in net employment was driven by steep job losses in the last quarter of the year. Among the most hard-hit sectors were manufacturing, which saw 50,000 fewer businesses in the fourth quarter compared with the previous year, followed by distribution, 41,000 fewer. In wholesale and retail trade, where business activity fell 5
