Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an optical apparatus having a support member and a lens holder having a plurality of lenses fixed thereon, and more particularly to an optical apparatus, such as a projection display apparatus and a projector, provided with a mechanism for rotating the lens holder about an axis extending in a direction of an optical axis. 2.

Description of the Related Art In recent years, a projector including a digital micro mirror device (DMD) or liquid crystal device as an image display device has been developed. There has also been a projector provided with a mechanism for adjusting the amount of light incident upon the image display device, the optical axis of a projection lens, or the position of an optical filter.

Some examples of such a projector are disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-open Nos.

2005-222598 and 2005-180551. The projector disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-open No. 2005-222598 has a number of lens cylinders one for each of three colors of light (red, blue, and green), a plurality of lens holders, and three lens wheels for rotating the lens holders about two axes extending perpendicular to each other in directions of the optical axis of a projecting optical system. Each of the lens cylinders is disposed on a support member which is removably fixed to a housing of the projector. The support member holds the corresponding lens cylinder with a fastener, such as a screw, which extends through a plurality of holes in the support member. The projector disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-open No. 2005-1805

A: First of all the machine has a 5.1 sound card, it definitely can not do surround. Secondly, even if it did there is no way of configuring it. I could certainly hope to get it up to something like 4.1, but that is far from doing surround. Renters don't typically miss the extra space the neighborhood parks can provide, but that doesn't stop Portland City Council's Transportation and Equity Committee from urging people to sign up for the city's new year-round nighttime transportation service.

Portland's Streetcar -- which runs exclusively at night starting at 5 p.m. -- is designed to connect riders with many of Portland's attractive side-street-lined neighborhoods, including the Pearl District, the Pearl/Eastmoreland area, the Lloyd District, the Mississippi (and Spring) Creek corridor and the city's Central Eastside. "It was a really big hit, the first time it started running," said Jane Sullivan, whose family lives in the Mississippi/Spring Creek corridor. But until this month, the service was only offered during the summer and fall; just over 13,000 rides were taken during those limited hours. Now that the winter season is here and residents are once again moving through the city, the Transportation and Equity committee has decided it's time to try again. This time, the city is offering free rides from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. to first-time users only. And, in order to make sure that the service runs well, the committee is expanding the number of available trains. The service was first offered in late August and early September in an area northeast of the Lloyd District. That first area had 24 trains running at one point. This new service, which begins Monday, October 5 and runs until 10 p.m. on weekdays and until midnight on weekends, will have 50 trains, which include two maintenance cars. Eligibility is limited, though: Tickets are limited to one trip in any direction in one ticket. That's usually enough to get many people through the door, but it's hard to predict what kinds of crowds it will pull. The committee has some hard data on where people have already been: This summer's service had about 7,000 riders. "We've got a very good idea where we did and didn't do well," said committee chairman Steve Novick.

The committee has also started to evaluate ridership data 6d1f23a050
