One of the most successful Indian brand Kunal Kapur, the marketing manager for the collection of luxury watch brands, has recently been invited to speak on the significance of fashion at the Indian Institute of Technology, Bombay. In his address to students at IIM, he broke the boundaries of conventional clothes to conventional speakers as he gushed about the late Indian fashion icon Anita Dongre and her performance on the ramp for the Manish Malhotra show for Lakmé Fashion Week. "In Indian fashion, particularly in Mumbai, there are two prominent women you'll hear a lot about: Anita Dongre and Poonam. Both of them are super-creative, driven women, and they have a big presence in the industry," he said. "Both of them can be seen on the ramp on any day of the week. Their influence can be felt all around the world. The most distinguished brand that Anita and Poonam have created is actually called Indian Wear. It's a pretty unique brand that is inspired from the original drapes we see in the sari. It's the finest in Indian wear that any brand could hope to produce." Watch: Kunal Kapur interview, design collective, inspirations and father-son duo Talking about the best fashion trends for 2016, Kunal added, "There's a new trend for women that you'll see in the recent Lakmé fashion shows: a sense of confidence. Women are wearing a lot of makeup and bright colours. There's also a new wave of statement jewellery, which includes statement earrings and pendants and necklaces. Everything seems to be loud this year. The next step is muted colours, which are very prevalent in India. This year, women's fashion will see a progression towards light, airy colours, with a strong attention to craftsmanship." A self-confessed lover of the arts, Kunal Kapur equally
