The efficacy of teicoplanin, cefepime, cefuroxime and ofloxacin in outpatients with community-acquired infections was compared with that of amoxicillin/clavulanic acid. In this open, randomized multicentre study, 1,085 patients received either 200 mg of teicoplanin once daily, 2 g of cefepime twice daily, 2 g of cefuroxime twice daily or 500 mg of ofloxacin three times daily for 10 days. The primary efficacy variable was the clinical and bacteriological response at the test-of-cure visit (10-14 days after therapy). The clinical response was excellent in 78.4%, good in 12.7%, fair in 5.3% and unsatisfactory in 3.3% of patients, and the microbiological response was eradication of the causative pathogen in 92.6%, persistence in 1.8% and in 0.6% a re-infection. Bacteriological response was excellent in 90.5%, good in 8.1% and unsatisfactory in 1.4% of patients. Clinical efficacy was similar in the four treatment groups. Bacteriological response was superior for cefuroxime and ofloxacin, but was similar for cefepime and teicoplanin. This study showed the effectiveness of cefepime, cefuroxime and ofloxacin in the treatment of community-acquired respiratory tract infections.
